

About the Canadian Council for Refugees' Working Groups and their work

The CCR's three Working Groups provide the forum for CCR members and other refugee and immigrant rights advocates to exchange information, network and develop policy positions in particular areas of concern. Each Working Group is responsible for preparing resolutions, following up on action items, and planning workshops for the consultations, as well as for advising the CCR Executive on policy. The Working Group meetings are closed to representatives of government and the media.

The CCR Working Groups meet four times a year. Two of these meetings take place during the consultations in May and November of each year. The other two series of working group meetings take place in February (in Toronto) and in September (in Montreal).

The working group meetings offer an excellent opportunity to:

- > Participate in efforts to promote refugee protection and resettlement, and the settlement of refugees and immigrants
- > Discuss in depth pressing issues affecting refugees and immigrants in Canada
- > Share information and strategies with others from across Canada
